

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A printing apparatus that has received a request for canceling a print job determines whether the print job can be canceled, and transmits the determined result to a user of a print service before the print job is canceled. The print job is canceled in a process other than the process that has received the request for canceling the print job. After the print job has been canceled, the printing apparatus notifies a predetermined destination of the completion of canceling the print job.